“Partnering” with Families:
Is it just a word....or are we living it?

When: Friday, June 3, 2011

Time: 0900 Pacific Time /1200 Eastern Time

Why you want to attend:

We use the term “Patient and Family Centered Care” very freely; but in reality, is it more than just words?

- Does the family see cohesiveness in our team, continuity in information and plan?
- Do we build trust by truly partnering with each other, managing each other up and then asking the family what they are hearing, seeing and experiencing?
- Do we listen, respect and use each other’s expertise in bringing knowledge and information to the family?

This presentation is also designed to get us thinking about how we partner with each as well as with our patient’s family.

Our learning Objectives:

1. Identify 2 behaviors that create a barrier to building a trusting relationship with families
2. Describe/discuss how the collaborative practice of the healthcare team can impact a families experience.

Presenter:

Liz Drake, MSN, RN, CNS, CNNP, has been a practicing neonatal nurse for nearly 30 years and Developmental Care/Family Centered Care are her passions. She is currently the CNS in the NICU at Children’s Hospital of Orange County, Mission Campus. She is a published author, participates in ongoing clinical research related to developmental care and is a nationally recognized presenter and consultant.
